Message from the Founder & President

The year 2025–26 was another step in Yaqeen Welfare Foundation's journey of serving communities with compassion, dignity and practical support. Our work continued to focus on education as a pathway to long-term transformation, while healthcare, humanitarian assistance and community development remained important pillars of our service.

What gives us the greatest encouragement is not only the number of activities completed, but the stories behind them. Children who had been outside the education system are finding pathways back to learning. Young people are moving toward higher education and, in some cases, returning as teachers and contributors to their own communities. Families are receiving support in moments of need, and community health services are reaching people who have limited access to affordable care.

Our team has also continued to contribute through voluntary effort, allowing educational events and community activities to take place without additional event expenditure. We remain committed to stronger documentation, financial accountability, institutional development and transparent partnerships as Yaqeen moves forward.

I thank our team members, volunteers, collaborators, donors and community supporters whose efforts made this work possible. Our next phase is to deepen our focus on out-of-school children, expand educational opportunities in underserved and suburban areas, strengthen health and empowerment initiatives, and continue building Yaqeen as a sustainable institution.

STORIES OF CHANGE

When Support Becomes a New Direction

Numbers show scale. Stories show what sustained support can mean for a family. The following case studies are drawn from the experiences shared by Yaqeen and illustrate educational continuity, Qur'anic learning and the movement from beneficiary to contributor.

01 | Ayesha Hassan & Her Siblings

Ayesha Hassan, aged 18, comes from a financially disadvantaged family where the father initially had little interest in continuing the children's education. Over the past five years, the combined efforts of Ayesha's mother and the Yaqeen team helped her remain connected with education. Ayesha completed Hifz-ul-Qur'an and, through five years of non-formal education, completed middle level. She is now being prepared for admission to Grade 9, while efforts continue to encourage her father to support the next stage of her education.

Her 17-year-old sister Alisha has also completed Hifz and continues her schooling. Her sister Aqsa is studying at Level 2 and has completed memorization of 18 Juz. Her younger brother Subhan is enrolled in Grade 1 formal schooling. The family illustrates how sustained support can gradually transform the educational prospects of an entire household.

02 | Neha & Her Siblings

Neha completed her school education and then Intermediate with a strong academic position. After completing her Intermediate, Yaqeen included her in its team. She has applied to NED University for higher education and is now contributing to community education: she teaches school-going children and also provides evening tuition in a collaborative community setting. Her siblings have also progressed through their respective classes and completed their education stages during the year.

Neha's journey represents a particularly meaningful transition: from receiving educational opportunity to helping create educational opportunity for others.

03 | Fiza Family

Fiza's family consists of three sisters and two brothers. For several years, the children's education could not continue because of limited educational capacity and resources. Through Yaqeen's formal and non-formal education pathways, the family has now re-entered education and is continuing its learning journey.

The Foundation's utilization statement notes that individual supporting vouchers and receipts are maintained by the Foundation. Legal and professional expenditure during the year included audit-related work.

INSTITUTIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Governance, Compliance & Accountability

Yaqeen Welfare Foundation has been registered with the Social Welfare Department, Government of Sindh, since 2015. It is also registered with the Sindh Charity Commission. The Foundation's Pakistan Centre for Philanthropy (PCP) certification process is approximately 80% complete and is progressing toward completion.

Strengthening the Institution

- Maintaining documentary support for charitable expenditure.
- Strengthening financial reporting and audit documentation.
- Continuing legal and professional compliance.
- Developing clearer program-wise reporting and impact measurement.
- Building stronger partnerships and donor-facing accountability.

Volunteerism as a Resource

A notable feature of Yaqeen's operating model is the contribution of voluntary effort. The Foundation reports that a number of educational and community activities were delivered through the efforts of its team without additional event expenditure. This volunteer contribution increases the reach that can be achieved from limited financial resources.
